Historic Background

LOTTE New York Palace boasts a rich heritage leading back to 1882 when Henry Villard, one of the nation's most prominent financiers, commissioned McKim, Mead & White to create a residence of singular style. In keeping with the times, The Villard Mansion was conceived in the neo-Italian Renaissance tradition, after the Palazzo della Cancelleria in Rome and today stands as one of the most beautiful living tributes to the Gilded Age.

In the mid-Seventies, the Archdiocese of New York, owners of the land, cleared the way for hotel development. This enabled the famous residence to be accessible once again to lovers of art and architecture. To bridge the architectural gap between the landmark and the new hotel that would be joined to it, Emery Roth & Sons, P.C. designed a monolithic tower of dark bronze, reflective glass and anodized aluminum that recedes from - rather than overpowers - the rosy-hued Villard Mansion. The modern tower integrates with its environment as it mirrors the surrounding cityscape.

When the hotel opened in 1980 as The Helmsley Palace, The Villard Mansion had been restored in preparation for a role as hotel public space. To return The Villard Mansion to its original grandeur, experienced artisans and craftsmen documented measurements and made detailed interior drawings of every room. Just as in an archaeological dig or historic reconstruction, floorboards were individually removed and labeled to enable exact repositioning after repair. All interior sections had to be re-laid in precisely the same pattern and positioned to reproduce the landmark-protected interiors.

Courtyard

The hotel's world-renowned courtyard, the original Madison Avenue carriage entrance of The Villard Mansion, was redesigned during the hotel's 1980 restoration to incorporate motifs from the flooring of several 15th-century Italian cathedrals. Today, pedestrians enter The Courtyard through tall iron gates to find a beautiful retreat from the busy Midtown streets. The Courtyard also serves as the entryway to Trunk Club, the innovative styling and retail service for men and women, which opened its New York clubhouse inside The Villard Mansion in 2015.

Food & Beverage Venues

The hotel's 2013 renovation also saw the addition of four distinct food and beverage venues from a high-end drinking salon that houses some of the world's finest wines & spirits, to a Parisian-inspired twist on a classic New York bakery.

Rarities

Rarities is an intimate 25-seat salon that offers an exclusive and personalized drinking experience catered to New York's elite. The reservation-only venue, accessed through a discreet entrance just steps from the hotel's courtyard, features an eclectic and abundant menu of exceptional Champagnes, Prohibition-style bottled spirits, modern classics and a connoisseur's wine cellar.

Troubles Trust

A cozy, subterranean cocktail bar and lounge tucked away under the grand staircase in the hotel's lobby, Trouble's Trust is the savvy theater goer's ultimate destination for a pre or post show drink. In addition to a diverse range of beers and wines, the menu of hand crafted cocktails features cheeky concoctions like the “Pampered Pooch” and the “Queen of Mean,” that pay homage to Leona Helmsley and her pup Trouble, the bar’s namesake.

Tavern on 51

Accessed directly from 51st street, hotel guests and New Yorkers alike can slip into this sultry hideaway outfitted to evoke old New York. The curated collection of cocktails offers creative spins on specialty and vintage cocktail lists in addition to a comprehensive selection of wine and beer. The bar’s unique interior pays homage to the historic Villard Mansion through period details and landmarked elements like stained glass windows, juxtaposed with modern design touches.

Pomme Palais

Located on the ground floor, Pomme Palais provides a new take on the classic New York City bakery with a rotating menu of seasonal indulgences perfect for guests on the go. Signature items include vibrant colored macarons, warm house-made croissants and mouthwatering eclairs.
